

10,000 TRAINED CADETS WANTED

Scabbard and Blade Starts Campaign to Pledge Men for Service.

A resolution giving any man who is or has ever been a cadet officer in the cadet corps of twelve large universities the opportunity to pledge his services to the Government in time of war was one of the issues of the annual convention of Scabbard and Blade, a national society of cadet officers, which met in Minneapolis last Friday and Saturday.

Already 1,192 such men, trained for three or more years by regular army officers, have filed their names with the War Department. The society is planning to start a campaign for 10,000 such pledges. The Universities and colleges whose representatives have pledged themselves are: Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Cornell, Purdue, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania State, Washington State, Michigan Agricultural, Kansas Agricultural and Iowa State.

Officers from these universities are considered by the War Department to have had sufficient training to make them available as commissioned officers in volunteer regiments in time of war. Every past and present cadet officer will be notified by letter of the plan, asking all for a pledge in answer to the nation's call.

There are at present thirty-six commissioned officers in the cadet corps of the University of Missouri and several other men in the University who have formerly been commissioned officers. A majority have signified their intention of signing the pledge formulated by Scabbard and Blade, should it materialize in the near future. Several of the local cadet officers have already pledged themselves to the Government.
